

Stanton Chase announces new Global Sector Leader for Banking

ATHENS – Manos Panorios, Managing Partner of the Stanton Chase Athens office, has been named Global Sector Leader for Banking at Stanton Chase.

The announcement was made by Christopher Arnold, Managing Director of the Boston office and Global Practice Leader of Financial Services for Stanton Chase, a global retained executive search firm with more than 70 offices in 45 countries.

“It is my distinct pleasure to announce that Manos Panorios has been chosen to serve the firm as our Global Sector Leader for Banking,” Arnold announced. “Manos will be responsible for providing continued thought leadership and guidance to our clients and search consultants who are situated in our offices around the globe. In addition, Manos will be a trusted resource for critical thinking, best practices, and leadership assessment. He has led important search mandates at the highest levels within our clients’ organizations in EMEA and our other regions, and he has an unwavering commitment to his clients and Stanton Chase.”

Manos is a distinguished member of the firm and a proven and trusted partner to the firm’s clients. Since March 2014 Manos has held the position of Central and Eastern Europe/South Eastern Europe Financial Services Practice Leader at Stanton Chase, a role in which he supports global banking clients. Since 2013 he has also been Managing Partner of the Athens office. For over a decade prior to that he managed numerous demanding projects in the banking and insurance sectors, as well as high-profile Financial Assignments through all industries. Manos joined Stanton Chase in 1998 as Senior Consultant and Finance Manager, bearing extensive experience as a financier in the consumer, services and construction sectors.

Manos earned a Bachelor's degree in Finance from the Athens University of Economics and Business and a Postgraduate Diploma in Business Administration from the University of Leicester.
